SL-One
MSRP: $35 Issue: Sep 2008
Bicycling Review Page: 85

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The tool-free attachment of the SL-One is "perfectly fine," though it has the most traditional mounting bracket of the three finalists, "which means slightly less versatility" and "rubber shims are needed to fit it to smaller handlebars." The beam pattern is similar to the Planet Bike Blaze, with a single, bright center beam that illuminates in steady or flashing mode. The TL-2100 rear blinky has a tool-free seatpost mount and includes four modes, the most of any finalist. It also "puts out the most light" with "decent peripheral visibility, too." As twilight descended, one tester "felt a little safer knowing the TL-2100 was blasting behind me."
